

MacARTHUR GETS HUGE RECEPTION IN MELBOURNE

General Tells People He Has Every Confidence In Success

"I SHALL DO MY BEST"

Modern War Requires Careful Preparation, He Tells Crowds

By Ralph B. Jordan
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

MELBOURNE, Mar. 21.—Welcomed by a huge, enthusiastic crowd as he arrived in Melbourne to launch his program for eventual defeat of Japan, Gen. Douglas MacArthur today told the people of Australia he has "every confidence in the ultimate success of our joint cause."

"I shall do my best," the colorful hero of Bataan told a grateful Australia, after he had received one of the greatest receptions ever accorded by the island continent.

"Modern war requires something more than courage and willingness to die," he warned. "It requires careful preparation. This means the furnishing of sufficient troops and sufficient material to meet the known strength of the potential enemy. No general can make something from nothing."

"My success or failure will depend primarily upon the resources which our respective governments can place at my disposal. My faith in them is complete. In any event, I shall do my best. I shall keep the faith of my soldiers."

Hours before MacArthur's train arrived from Adelaide, the Melbourne station was jammed. Awaiting patiently with the crowd was the General's guard of honor, made up of Filipinos, all under the command of Major Victor Klineck. The Filipinos were soldiers who had been wounded in the Philippine fighting under MacArthur and brought to Australia in a hospital ship.

Finally the train, hauled by two locomotives, pulled into the station and jerked to a stop. First aboard was Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett, recently appointed deputy to MacArthur and former commander of the United States forces in Australia.

Through the windows of the General's private car, he could be seen greeting Brett warmly. After greeting the other officers in MacArthur's party, General Brett alighted from the train.

Quakertown High School Publication Gets Awards

QUAKERTOWN, Mar. 21.—The literary publication of Quakertown high school, known as "The Quaker Challenge," has for the second consecutive year won the highest award possible in the mimeographed magazine section of the national school publication contest at Columbia University, New York.

The local publication was given the medalist award. There were approximately 50 competitors in the division. Last year the local publication received "The All Columbia Prize" for short stories and essays.

Another U. S. Naval Vessel Torpedoed

Washington—The Navy Department today revealed that another large U. S. merchant ship has been torpedoed off the Atlantic coast.

Details of the attack were not disclosed, but it was presumed that the vessel was a victim of a Nazi submarine.

Name of the ship was withheld by the Navy for reasons of security and it was not revealed whether or not the ship was sunk.

Australian Bombers Raid Yamdena Island

London—Australian bombers yesterday staged heavy raids on Yamdena Island, between Timor and New Guinea, thus indicating that the Japanese have occupied this stepping stone, London newspapers reported today.

Meanwhile, Japanese Bombers raided the coastal towns of Broome and Derby in Northwestern Australia today, according to a communique issued at Canberra, the Exchange Telegraph reported. There was no damage or casualties, the communique declared.

Wainwright's Troops Inflict Heavy Losses

Washington—In the second major surprise maneuver in recent weeks, the American-Filipino troops of General Jonathan Wainwright have inflicted heavy casualties on the Japanese in a raid near Zamboanga on Mindanao island in the south of the Philippine Archipelago.

Announcement was made by the War Department in a communique which also disclosed that the harbor defenses of Manila Bay far to the north were subjected to heavy shelling by the enemy.

It was the second time since Wainwright succeeded Gen. Douglas MacArthur as commander of defenders in the Philippines that he reported successful counter-action against the invaders.

While there was no fighting between the land forces on Bataan, Gen. Wainwright advised the War Department that the guns of the four American forts across Manila Bay "effectively returned the fire" directed on them by the big Japanese Eight-inch shore batteries.

The latest bombardment, however, inflicted very little damage of military consequence, according to the War Department.

On Mindanao at the southern end of the Archipelago, American and Filipino troops inflicted "heavy casualties" in a sudden surprise raid near the port city of Zamboanga, the communique related.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Activities of Interest To All In The Various Communities

CLEANED BY REPORTERS

Announcement was made today by Elbert W. Haldeman that a meeting of the Bucks County Fruit Growers' Association will be held on Monday, March 23, at 7 o'clock at "Twin Gables," Quakertown. Mr. Haldeman, North Main street, Doylestown, and County Agent William F. Greenawalt are in charge of reservations.

A telegram was received on Saturday by Mrs. Ralph Master, Chalfont, stating that her son, Robert Winkelman, had been promoted to the rank of corporal, and that he had landed safely in Australia.

County Agent William F. Greenawalt today announced that a dinner meeting of the Richland Senior Extension Club will be held on Friday, March 27, at 7 o'clock, in Trainer's Restaurant, Quakertown. Dinner reservations are in charge of Walter Landis, Quakertown, R. D. 2.

A total of 104 pints of blood were donated by volunteer men and women of Doylestown and vicinity, at the Doylestown Emergency Hospital blood donor clinic.

There were only six rejections in the long list of donors, and officials of the American Red Cross, under whose auspices the project was sponsored, complimented the Doylestown group for their fine co-operation.

The blood donations will be used for the armed forces of the United States and will be placed in a plasma which will be dried and used when needed.

SENATOR M. HARVEY TAYLOR TOSSES POLITICAL BOMBSHELL AT U. S. SENATOR JAS. J. DAVIS

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 21.—Senator M. Harvey Taylor, gubernatorial campaign manager for Major General Edward Martin, today tossed his first political bombshell at U. S. Senator James J. Davis. Said Taylor:

"Senator Davis has at last clearly indicated his intention of running away from his responsibility as the only Republican representative of Pennsylvania in the United States Senate. By reason of his length of service he has a senior position on important committees which gives him opportunities which would not be available to his successor."

"It is simply astounding that Davis, the senior Republican member of the Naval Affairs Committee of the United States Senate, the most important committee of the Congress just at this particular time, would leave that body and forsake and neglect his duties for purely selfish reasons."

"For months Davis has been neglecting important committee meetings and Senate sessions, angling for a more lucrative position in State politics. It is a well recognized fact that

DIARY OF AN A. E. F. WAR CORRESPONDENT

Robert G. Nixon, I. N. S. Reporter, Embarks With Battle-Clad Doughboys

DESTINATION IS SECRET

(Note: Crack I. N. S. reporter Robert G. Nixon is back in the war anew, after a brief sojourn in Washington where he covered the State Department. He received his first baptism of fire when he was transferred to the European scene from Washington in October, 1939, shortly after the outbreak of the 2nd World War. Accredited to the British Expeditionary Force in Belgium, war correspondent Nixon barely managed to escape with his life in the historic evacuation of Dunkirk. On two occasions, British officers who were escorting Nixon were wounded by German bullets, but in each instance Nixon's luck held and he escaped unscathed.)

Now he is with the American Expeditionary Force in Northern Ireland, and while on this assignment will do a daily War Diary which we will try to carry as a regular feature for your readers, mail and censorship conditions permitting.—International News Service.

By Robert G. Nixon
(I. N. S. War Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 21.—(INS)—The colonel's voice comes over the phone in crisp, clipped phrases: "Report to the Office of Commanding General, Port of Embarkation, Blank City, prior to midnight."

It is six weeks since Pearl Harbor and these are terse orders to join the first American Expeditionary Force of the second World War. My destination is known only to the Army and Navy high command. It may be the Far East or the Eastern Mediterranean. It may be Europe, or West Africa, or Russia—for all these are the fighting fronts of this titanic inter-hemispheric conflict.

I glance swiftly at the office clock. The hands split 3.30 p. m. In only eight and a half hours I must be aboard the troop transport. The port of embarkation is several hundred miles away. I can make it by plane, but the train is out of question with the things that first must be done. But can I get a plane seat on such short notice in these war days?

I grab the phone and call the airport. "Sorry, everything full up; to

One Man's Opinion

By WALTER KIERNAN
(I. N. S. Staff Writer)

There is nothing in our handbook to indicate what happens to the union shop or closed shop when we start shifting men in and into war industries.

It makes an interesting question for the Saturday Debating Club.

We are going to take a national inventory of our 44 through 64 year old men to see what they can do in war industry. Then, presumably, we're going to put them there.

If we aren't, why are we taking the inventory?

If we are, how will the National Labor Relations Board, which now polices union shop contracts, and the unions which drew them, handle the situation?

In a few weeks' time men in the 20 to 44 year draft will be quizzed on their skills. Eventually considerably more than 10 per cent of the entire population will be on the "help available" lists.

And the labor relations situation has not been frozen.

Thought for the day: Information, please.

BRISTOL MAN KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE AND FOUR ARE INJURED IN TWO CRASHES OCCURRING IN THIS AREA

Maurice McIlvaine, 37, of Lafayette Street, Fatally Injured When Struck by Car on Bristol Pike — Bristol Man Was Walking Along The Highway With Back to Traffic

A Bristol man was killed and four Philadelphians were injured in two automobile accidents which occurred in this area last night and early today.

The Bristol man killed was Maurice McIlvaine, 37, of 310 Lafayette street.

McIlvaine was struck by a car driven by Ralph Orrino, 913 Garden street, and the accident occurred below the Bristol Cemetery on Route 13 at about 8.40 last evening.

Orrino told Private Phillips of the Oxford Valley barracks of Penna. Motor Police, that he was driving alone down the Bristol Pike and going about 40 miles per hour. He did not see the man until it was too late. He then swerved his car to the left but could not avoid striking the Bristol man.

While not positive, Orrino was of the opinion that McIlvaine was walking well toward the center of the highway. When picked up, McIlvaine was still on the concrete near the right edge.

The Bristol man suffered a broken neck, broken right leg, deep laceration of the left side and of the head.

YOUNG PEOPLE HEAR OF S. AMERICAN MISSIONS

Miss Kathryn Bieri Tells of Tour Made Last Year

METHODIST FELLOWSHIP

LANGHORNE, Mar. 21.—A "telescopic" view of South America, presented by Miss Kathryn Bieri, Philadelphia, in Langhorne Methodist Church last evening, vividly showed not only the primitive mode of living of the people of that vast land, but how protestant missionaries have made slow but steady progress in spite of tremendous opposition.

Miss Bieri, who spent several years as a missionary to India, told members of the Bristol Group Youth Fellowship last evening at their bi-monthly rally, of her extensive journey through South American countries last year, when with a party she toured the mission fields, seeing what work is being done in the Methodist churches and schools there, visiting the leper colony, the large cities, and making treks to points of scenic splendor.

Miss Bieri, daughter of the Rev. John Bieri, well-known to young people of the Methodist conference through his years of leadership in Epworth League work, was introduced by the Fellowship president, Franklin Reader, of the Hulmeville association.

The speaker, at the outset, stressed the point that if the peoples of the United States are conscious of their neighbors to the south politically, economically, and in other ways, they should be even more interested in their Christian welfare.

She dwelt for some time on modes of transportation, in this manner showing how difficult it is for missionaries to work due to this one problem alone. She told of the hazardous mountain roads, usually not wide enough to accommodate a modern-day automobile. "Some of the missionaries in traversing these roads with sheer drops from the side and no guard-rails, and the road-bed no wider than the car, have told me they have stopped in the midst of their journeys to pray for strength to continue driving." Travel by muleback was told of in a humorous manner; and as regards train travel, Miss Bieri mentioned one may go either by

WAGES OF SCHOLARSHIP

The question of what becomes of all the bright schoolboys gets a good going-over in the thirty-sixth annual report of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, recently off the press. Under the revealing chapter title, "The Wages of Scholarship," there are shown tables giving the salaries earned ten years after graduation by men who, in college, achieved various grades in their courses.

"The outstanding impression which the data leaves with the objective enquirer," says William S. Learned, the author of the chapter, "is certainly not one of close correspondence between academic record and later achievement as expressed in salaries or advancement in position. It is fairly clear that the average 'grade' in college, or at least an examination index of mastered knowledge, is usually a factor of some importance in predicting a student's success, but it is obvious too that with this measure alone one often fails to penetrate to the real explanation of a student's power or weakness.

"To be significant the measure of a student's knowledge must be considered in the setting of his moral and emotional qualities and in the light of his dominant attitudes; it must be supplemented with an estimate of his skill in arriving at fruitful insights and of his willingness to respect and pursue them."

As Mr. Learned points out, "few such observations now go into the official record. This usually sets down with democratic lack of discrimination features which may have little importance in a given case, while overlooking traits or circumstances that are eloquent for the individual's future. It is too much to expect that the financial rewards of life will ever arrange themselves outwardly in accordance with any reasonable scale of 'just desserts'."

LAZY RUBBER

Mr. Dub Golfer and Mr. Tyro Tennisplayer are due for some surprises when they hit the first "war balls"—golf and tennis—which will soon be here. The new golf ball may not go as far and the tennis ball may not bounce as high as heretofore, but the experts assure sports enthusiasts that America will be able to enjoy as much golf and tennis as it desires during this wartime emergency.

By early summer Americans will be swinging on courts and links at "war balls." The tennis ball situation, while acute, seems to be pretty well ironed out since the manufacturers are prepared to meet the problem by producing the new ball made almost exclusively from reclaimed rubber.

But in the case of the golf ball the reclaiming process will not work because reclaimed rubber will not take the vulcanization necessary in construction. Golf ball makers hope to get a small allotment of crude rubber since the game has been labeled essential to America's health.

Even so, with the deader "war balls" the days of sub-par golf and 280-yard drives seem to be numbered. And the slam-bang tennis player may see the day when his "aces" and "kills" will be rationed. Thus the necessities of war hit America in another vital place. But golfing and tennis will go on—that is, if any one has the time after wedding his Victory garden.

The Great Game of Politics

is the co-operative spirit which seems to animate the working men—and women, too. Another is that the women are paid the same wages as the men for comparable work. Nor is there any segregation of the sexes. That was tried but abandoned. Now men and women work side by side without friction or foolishness.

THE average pay is a little over $5 a day, which in a plant such as the Consolidated Aircraft at San Diego, makes the weekly payroll for three shifts of five days each really stupendous. Despite the President's resistance to the effort, unquestion-ably production would be greatly increased if the 40 hour week could be lengthened to 48 hours. Quickly, it would leap ahead of Mr. Roosevelt's program and the full weight of American industry be made to count. But the time and a half pay for every hour over 40 is a prohibitive penalty. In a plant such as the Consolidated, it would involve so huge an increase in the payroll as to be clearly impossible. Piled on top of taxes, the increase would compel the company to operate at a deficit and put it well on the road to bankruptcy. This isn't a guess. It is a fact easily demonstrable by the figures. Yet, if it were possible to get men legally to work six consecutive days of 8 hours each, the jump in production would be great.

IF it were not for the support given these by the President and the compliant Mr. Nelson the 40 hour week law long ago would have been modified and production be far ahead of the present mark. It cannot be done so long as the White House and the head of the War Production Board are against it, but it is a mistake to think there is strong feeling on the subject among the mass of the workers, themselves.

IT is also a mistake to think that the recent movement, sponsored by Mr. Nelson, for the creation of labor management committees in all defense plants meets a demand from the workers. The demand comes from the Murray-Hillman group of CIO leaders. It is announced as a drive to increase production, originating with the WPB. Actually, it originated in the Murray-Hillman group and seems a pretty sure way of slowing down the industrial machine just as it is getting into its stride. No amount of WPB publicity or Nelson pep talks will alter the fact that this move is a step toward the goal of labor management. It is a tragic thing that in so grave a crisis the labor politicians should be so potent in Washington.

Club Women Gather To Hear
Musical Program By Children

YARDLEY, Mar. 21—Mrs. Harry K. Ambler, vice president of Yardley Civic Club, presided at the meeting on Thursday afternoon in the club rooms, when music was furnished by the chorals of Mafekfield school.

The program was under the direction of Miss Doris E. Holcombe, and included: "Fairy Tale" and "Old King Cole," chorus; violin solo, "Perpetual Motion," Ross Samuel Alger; "Mighty Lak A Rose," "Gypsy Love Song," and "Will-O-The-Wisp," chorus, Betty Ann Smith favored with a piano solo, "Prelude in C Minor" (Rachmaninoff).

The chorus favored with three selections from Mother Goose, "Sing A Song of Six Pence," "Little Boy Blue" and "Three Little Pigs." Jean Smith sang "Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses." The chorus closed with "Looking for the Lost Chord." Miss Betty Ann Smith was piano accompanist, and Miss Margaret Briggs, announced the program.

An invitation was received from Mafekfield Mothers Club to attend a fashion show on April 14, at which time they will also have a speaker on "Finger Printing."

Mrs. Bruce B. Woodhouse, chairman of the program, and Mrs. Robert M. Barbour talked on "Drama."

Mrs. Barbour read an original play "Anna" written by her and Mrs. Durrell N. Noyes for entrance in a county contest.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)
Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

O Lord, our God, wilt Thou create within us a simple faith in Thy Word, and cause us to see that naught of all Thou hast promised can ever fail of fulfillment. Evermore increase our faith. Keep us walking with Thee; safeguard us from all attacks of the evil one, and if it be Thy good pleasure, take us into the circle of Thine anointed ones, that we may more effectively serve Thee. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

When "Slapsie" Maxie Rosenbloom got a look at his latest screen wardrobe, he was almost ready to quit the movies for good and go back to the bumps and bruises of the prize ring.

The costume which gave him the jitters was a baby blue infant's dress. He was asked to wear it for college initiation scenes in "Harvard, Here I Come," now at the Bristol Theatre.

William Frawley, featured in "Public Enemies," now showing at the Bristol Theatre, started out in life as a court reporter.

Tomorrow, "Sierra Sue" and "Let 'em Have It," will be shown.

GRAND THEATRE

Out of the homely virtues of a group of Welsh mining folk, and out of the modest lives of a few, sturdy leaders in their midst, has been fashioned a motion picture of great poetic charm and dignity, a film of such power and honesty that it can truly be regarded as the outstanding picture of this or any year. It is the film version of "How Green Was My Valley," at the Grand Theatre.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., one of the screen's most popular personalities, returns to the screen as the swashbuckling hero of the Alexandre Dumas classic, "The Corsican Brothers," which will have its local premiere at the Grand Theatre on Sunday.

RITZ THEATRE

"The Man Who Came to Dinner," which opened last night at the Ritz Theatre, is probably the most hilarious feast since the knife and fork were invented, for the play which rocked Broadway for two solid years is even more delightfully funny in the screen version. The notable flock of guests is headed by Bette Davis, Ann Sheridan, Monty ("The Man") Woolley and Jimmy Durante, Reginald Gardiner, Richard Travis and others, with Billie Burke and Grant Mitchell as hosts.

DI ANGELO PACED BRISTOL HIGH TEAM IN SCORING POINTS IN THE BASKETBALL SEASON NOW ENDED

Bristol high school's basketball team, which was one point short of winning the local championship, played 500 ball during the past season with eight wins against as many setbacks. Coach Bill Bartholomew's proteges lost their chance for the district title by dropping a 25 to 24 decision to Fallstunton in a playoff contest.

Official figures released by Coach Clarence Bartholomew, head of the physical education department, place Chick DiAngelo, star senior forward, at the top of the individual scoring list with 139 markers. He was followed by Jimmy Hopkins and Nick Melideo.

The Junior Varsity five, featuring several under-classesmen who will be available for next year's team, had a highly successful campaign and defeated nine victories against two defeats.

Members of the varsity were: James Perrino, manager; Anthony DiAngelo, James Hopkins, Paul Ruby, Joe Accardi, Ken Herrmann, Jack DeLong, J. DeLong, J. Potenza, J. Fuoco, A. Mandio, and Nick Melideo. These boys will all receive varsity letters in assembly.

The Jay Vee performers were: A. Ciarella, manager; K. Maag, A. Corisco, J. Pleban, J. Messenelli, M. Scancelli, C. Cammualco, J. Cordisco, L. Simons, W. Mack and Spadafora.

STRIKES AND SPARES

—by—
Tenpin Tattler II

The Ford V-8 team is back after three days of competition in the American Bowling Congress at Columbus, Ohio. . . . When they left the Ohio city, the locals were but 20 pins away from the leading team. . . . Albert "Kemps" Boccardo had a nice 607 total in the single matches to finish in the money. . . . Boccardo and "Chick" O'Boyle paired off in the doubles to finish 1136 and also came in for some prize money. . . . The local representatives were: Ralph Cahill, E. VanSeiver, E. Sutton, O'Boyle, Boccardo, and George Schumard. . . . They finished with a 2500 score to come in second place. . . . It is estimated that at least $100 in prize money will come to the Bristolians. . . . Bowling in the Penn-Jersey League, the Bristol Nationals lost 7 out of 9 against the Trenton Lazerte team. . . . Duble's 247 in the 3-man event and 257 in the singles sparked the Trenton team. . . . Cahill was high for Bristol with 228 in the singles, while O'Boyle had a high three of 577. . . . In the American section of the league, Bristol lost 6 out of 9 to the Trenton Lazerte. . . . Andy Moore hit 259 in a single game. . . . Andy hit four consecutive strikes and then had a spare. . . . He followed this with a quiet set of strikes but a couple of gutter balls ruined a 279 score. . . . On the local front, the National League race is getting hotter. . . . The Diamond team is hitting at a faster clip than any team in the local circuits. . . . They have an average of 900 points per game. . . . They have seven of their players in the first ten averages. . . . But still they trail the improved Brady's team by a few games. . . . Diamond recently hit a 2781 three-game score on alleys 1 and 2, which are hard to find. . . . Kerns of the Ladies' League hit a nice 927 for a high single game which is considered about tops in women's bowling. . . . this score popped up against the Bristolians. . . . Opposed to Keers was Sandy Carlo who hit her first 200 game of the circuit. . . . I wonder who scheduled games to be bowled on February 20th in the Major League? . . . It is surprising to see another name other than Keers leading the ladies' bowling. . . . Jim Christopher had quite a job in holding together the Ford V-8 team between the U. S. Army and defense work. . . . The Rohm & Haas team did good work against the Trenton Coopers.

of Mrs. Ruth Nuttall, at which time three new members were admitted. The club recently voted to change its name from Croydon-Cornwells Club to the Merry-makers.

Mrs. J. Walter Parish is suffering with a very badly sprained knee, caused by a fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ritter and children, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lamont White, Bristol.

Mr. and Mrs. James Grew entertained over the week-end Mr. and Mrs. Ferrell and son, Burlington, N. J.

The air raid wardens, now meeting in Harrington Hall, Fourth avenue, are preparing for their first aid instruction. The course will open next Wednesday evening.

Children Gather at Party For Little Joseph Ferrara

A birthday party was given for Joseph Ferrara, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Ferrara, Lafayette street, on Wednesday, in honor of his first anniversary. Game prizes were given to Anthony Juno and Rita Castor. Refreshments were served. Joseph received many gifts.

Others present: Jacqueline and Josie Giliardi, Beatrice Massiello, Theresa Juno, Margaret DiAngelo, Lily and Joseph Gesualdi, Antonette and Jean Angelina, Samuel Fenton, Ralph Wyhno, Regina Juno, Ralph Lalli, Rita Viodati, Jasper and Francis Ferrara, Lawrence Caruso, Mrs. L. Massiello, Mrs. Francis DiPrimo, Mrs. R. Troani, Mrs. Howard Appleton.

In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Ferrara entertained Mr. and Mrs. A. Juno, Mr. and Mrs. Carlo Juno, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Juno, Mr. and Mrs. Emidio Caruso, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wyhno, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph DiAngelo, Mrs. Margaret DiAngelo, George Hine, Miss Marcella Jacoby, Dominick Juno, Anthony and Jerry Juno, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ferrara, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cipolla, Miss Anna Mangiaracina. Carl Juno entertained with vocal solos.

1st, 2nd or 3rd class. Second class travel is in a box car, minus seats, and it too many travel that way in one car they must stand up all the way due to lack of space to sit on the floor. Third class provides "accommodations" on the roof of the train. In many areas boats are the only means of travel. In spite of these hardships and drawbacks the missionaries are persistently attempting to carry the Gospel of the Christ.

Miss Bieri told of seeing the Ecuadorian "navy," one small boat with two guns, one of which could not be fired, and the second when fired always putting machinery of the boat out of commission. "I thought I had seen the ultra in fifth when I was in India, but I changed my mind when I visited South America," added the speaker. "Illiteracy ranges from 75 to 95 per cent. Only the land owners are wealthy, and they are few. Our missionaries face lack of educational facilities as they attempt to train the people. They face the transportation problem, the cleanliness problem; and earthquakes are a menace, often wiping out churches, schools, and other buildings gained with such difficulty, in addition to the thousands killed." Miss Bieri told of 20,000 killed during one earthquake, in a city of 22,000 population. "The city was drenched with oil from airplanes flying low, and fire set thereto, as it was impossible to bury all the bodies.

A visit to a leper colony in Paraguay was of interest to the young people. The missionary told of the squalor in which the patients live, in ramshackle lean-tos, with no water supply, they being forced to walk four blocks to a stream for water. "Each must cook his or her own food over a little kerosene stove; there are no doctors and no nurses, no recreational facilities to help cheer them, and they lead a miserable existence."

The opposition the missionaries face in attempting to instill the principles of Christianity was further shown as Miss Bieri told how the children are taught to become good liars, "as they are told they cannot get through life without lying." Stealing is also part of their training, she added, as she mentioned seeing furniture in a physician's office furniture stolen during periods while he was consulting patients in an inner room, so with his third set he ordered chains."

"I know of missionaries who have been stoned by residents at orders from their leaders, being chased from the communities. But in spite of all the hardships and opposition, they are able to slowly advance, bringing to the poor, ignorant people a living, viable Christ who is their sympathetic friend and helper. We are proud of the schools the Methodists have established throughout the country, and we find the attitude of the people slowly changing. The people are more friendly to our workers, and that means that progress in the years to come will be better. We now find second generation Christians, and the good done through scholarships is tremendous. But we do need more scholarships and more missionaries for the people of South America."

Miss Bieri told of attending an Epworth League Institute in South America, where room and board was six cents a day, including three meals and afternoon tea. "Of course the meals were not like we have here, but they were ample," she added as she told of each Leaguer filling the bolster given him or her with hay, on which to sleep. The tremendous wealth of the country in jewels, ores, cattle was told of, it being added however that in spite of great wealth the work of the people needs to be directed in order to better spread the comforts of life, and improve living conditions.

The speaker told of the intense interest of the missionaries, one woman weighing only 70 pounds pulling teeth of prisoners in one of the jails by means of pliers, in exchange for the privilege of holding religious meetings and distributing tracts in the prison.

An account of a visit to the statue of the Christ of the Andes, 15,000 feet above sea level, high on the mountains between Argentina and Chile, was told of, Miss Bieri explaining how years ago when the two countries were about to fight because of a boundary dispute, someone conceived the idea of settling the matter peacefully, and from the melted weapons the statue of the Christ was made. "Sometimes we are too prone to forget the Christ in our disputes. Remember He says to us 'And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me.' We don't need more statues of the Christ, but we do need the living Christ in our hearts." The speaker ended with the lines "Live and help live is the cry of the old; live and help live is the cry of the new."

Young people's groups represented were: Bristol, Emille-Palis, Morrisville, Langhorne, Newtown, Yardley, Trevose, Bensalem, Harriman, Hulmeville, New Hope.

With Walter Gottsabend, Bensalem, resigning as publicity chairman, he having enlisted in the U. S. Navy, Charles Vansant, Bensalem, was elected to this position. The Rev. Robert E. Kieffer, Jr., of New Hope, lead in group singing; and the Rev. J. H. Bailey, of Trevose, offered prayer. Joan and Kermit Marsh, of Harriman Church, sang as a duet "Tell Me the Story of Jesus."

A dramatic tournament will be conducted in Bensalem Church social hall on May 1st; and on May 15th at the North District Convention in Bethlehem, a dramatic tournament will also be held. The winner from the Bristol group will present a play at the district convention. The May 22nd rally will be held in Emille church. Refreshments concluded the affair.

will address a meeting of the Doylestown Consumers' Co-operative Association on Wednesday, March 25, at 8 p. m., at the K. G. E. hall, South Main street and Oakland avenue, Doylestown. His subject will be, "The Basic Elements of Nutrition." The meeting is open to all interested persons.

Dr. Vorhaus, who practices in New York, is primarily a neurologist, but has specialized in research on vitamin B1.

Mrs. Walter Campbell will present at this meeting plans for setting up a co-operative canning kitchen this Summer to provide opportunity for members to can their garden produce together in the most scientific and efficient manner, as well as to can their surplus products for the use of others, and thus to conserve their time for other needed work.

A feature of the meeting will be a menu contest, with prize award, under the auspices of Mrs. Wynne James' recipe testing committee.

A "college for co-operatives," is being formed under the direction of Mrs. Alfred Rand, educational chairman.

TOUCHING ALL BASES

Rounding the Bags in Lower Bucks County As Well As in National Arenas

With JACK GILL

We all have to hand it to the person who goes out and digs in for himself. So many people and organizations merely exist in a hum-drum sort of way. They are content to ride along doing business in the same vein.

Quite some time ago, the state school heads instituted a ruling in the code which stated that finances to foster sports could not be drawn from the school treasury. In short, sports had to pay for themselves.

As a direct result, you find such affairs as Bensalem's annual gymnastic exhibition springing from the laws enacted by the powers in charge. All of the profits attained from the four-night show go into the pot to keep sports boiling for another year.

This is much better than operating on a discouraging policy of a "let's do the best we can" attitude. Some schools resort to student Athletic Associations to provide all of the finances required to run the athletic program. Langhorne, for instance, has done it for years and with great results. The students pay as they play and are glad to be able to take care of themselves. On a few occasions the Lions Club of that community has donated helmets and other equipment to assist the boys.

Newtown high school holds a bazaar-like circus each year to keep their kettle steaming. They held such an event last Friday evening, Morrisville, up until a few years ago, sponsored a minstrel show, and it was more fun than to watch grid races like Ted Reitzle, Buck Wallace, Al Johnson and all of the other stars at before an audience. At Bristol the student body co-operatively subscribes to activity tickets to aid in financing the extra-curricular list of events, while the recent action of the Fathers Association in revamping the field is a greatly appreciated act. And so it goes in all communities.

George Reimer had a lot to do with starting Bensalem's annual meet and the girls' athletic director, Helen Smith, probably outdid Reimer in later years. Women have more patience than the masculine set in putting over such affairs. For that reason, Miss Smith, ably assisted by new Coach Courses are being offered in: 1. Principles and Progress of Co-operatives; 2. Co-operatives During and After the War; 3. The Relation Between Production, Marketing and Consumers' Co-operatives; 4. How Far Can Co-operatives Go? 5. Co-operatives and Labor; and 6. Your Government's Attitude Toward Co-operatives.

MacArthur Gets Huge Reception in Melbourne

train and saluted while MacArthur came to the car door. Standing very straight and looking as impressive as anticipated, MacArthur lingered for a moment on the platform surveying the vast throng in the background and the Australian dignitaries in formal dress, the officers of the Australian and American armies and navies, all gathered up front.

Then he strode down the steps and shook hands with Australian War Minister Francis Forde, the chiefs of staff of the Australian forces and the cabinet members who served as an official reception committee.

"I am confident that the people of Australia will not let you down," Forde told MacArthur. "Your brilliant record will hearten the Australians and our Allies. Your arrival marks an era of still greater determination to speed up the war effort here."

MacArthur then inspected the guard of honor, including the proud Filipinos, who obviously were thrilled mightily at seeing their commander once again. The General posed briefly for photographs and then was taken by automobile to a Melbourne hotel. Mrs. MacArthur and their four-year-old son, Arthur, had left the train quietly and preceded him to the hotel.

Although obviously moved by his great reception, General MacArthur indicated that the welcoming festivities should cease promptly to allow him to turn his attention immediately to the stern business at hand. One of his first moves was expected to be a conference with a new Allied war council, which probably will include General Brett and the chiefs of the various branches of Australian forces.

It was expected that the first moves of the council would be directed toward implementing the defense of the continent and New Guinea island, with plans for the eventual counter-offensive taking shape shortly thereafter. MacArthur was reported to have conferred already on those plans with Minister Forde. The General is expected to confer with Prime Minister John Curtin on Tuesday.

Australian officials said they anticipated an early reorganization of the Pacific War Council with headquarters moved from London to Washington, in line with MacArthur's appointment as Supreme Allied Commander in the Southwest Pacific zone.

MacArthur's immediate front line, barring an early Japanese invasion attempt, will probably be the Allied-held portion of New Guinea island, where Nippon forces were still reported to be advancing through the Markham River Valley and Australian defenders were poised at vital Port Moresby.

As a present for their new commander, Australian and American bombers raided the Japanese-held port of Rabaul on New Britain island, and were reported to have sunk a heavy Nippon cruiser despite heavy anti-aircraft fire from ground batteries and ships in the harbor. The latest in a series of heavy Allied air blows was announced by Prime Minister Curtin.

Diary of An A. E. F. War Correspondent

morrow morning, perhaps, is the reply. I start to hang up, and hear the airport attendant saying: "Just a moment. I believe we can make it. We are putting on another section on the 7.30 flight." I figure quickly. I can just make it, with a few minutes to spare if there is no hitch elsewhere.

It will take a half hour getting to the airport. That leaves just over three hours to wind up my affairs in Washington, break the news to my family, pick up a uniform and kit, get my official War Correspondent's credentials from the War Department, change into uniform, pack and leave. I remember that I must also get a portable typewriter. For my last one was left on the French channel coast in the B. E. F. evacuation from the Dunkirk area in May, 1940.

This, happily, is accomplished by phone in a few minutes. I order a taxi and the race against time to collect a uniform, equipment and credentials begins. I must leave the office without a word of farewell to anyone for the War Department's injunction on secrecy is absolute, and no hint of this expeditionary force must leak out until it has arrived safely overseas. I reach home with just enough time to jump into uniform, throw a few things into a bag, and drive to the airport.

The tough job is saying goodbye to my wife on such short notice. We joke a little on the long ride to the airport to cover the awkward moments. A hurried farewell, the plane door is slammed, and the huge transport roars upward into the night.

The floodlights that for years have illumined the Capitol, Washington Monument and Lincoln Memorial are now blacked out, but elsewhere the neon signs, street lamps and auto headlights blink a warm farewell. Looking down on them as the plane roars into the night, I wonder when I'll see lighted cities again.

At the Port of Embarkation, long lines of khaki-clad doughboys in full battle kit, blue denim barracks bags bulging with spare equipment slung over their shoulders, are moving in slow lines up the gangways into the waiting transports, gray in their war paint. The steam winches of loading cranes are cluffing away, hoisting their cargo of war equipment. The yellow blobs of floodlights high overhead in the embarkation sheds gleam on the soldiers' tin hats and rifles.

MATA HART'S Daughter

By MAURICE DEKOBRA and LEYLA GEORGIE

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

Brinda watched with fascinated eyes as the opening grew wider. She was ready to cry out when, with a mixture of anger and relief, she recognized the long, horsey face and rheumy eyes of the housekeeper. The latter wore a dragged Mother Hubbard and a night-cap, under beneath which thin locks of gray hair straggled downward.

"For goodness' sake, Walker!" Brinda exclaimed in exasperation. "Why don't you knock—or at least just open the door and come in. Why must you be so stealthy?" Walker edged inside and closed the door behind her.

"Beg pardon, Miss," she answered hoarsely. "I didn't go for to startle you." She gazed owlishly about the room. "There's strange goings-on about tonight—queer people coming and going. I was in a worry, you being so late-like, getting home. Maybe you'd be wanting a cup of tea?"

Brinda was instantly repentant. Poor old soul—no wonder she had been infected by the miasma of mystery that enveloped the Sanderson home!

"That's thoughtful of you, Walker, dear." She kicked off her slippers. "Yes, I'd like some tea, if it isn't too much trouble."

"I'll fetch it," said the housekeeper. Still with the same surreptitious air, she vanished as she had come.

By the time she was back, Brinda was undressed and, clad in a loose negligee of yellow silk, lay relaxed on the big, old-fashioned bed—a massive piece as old it might be as the Sanderson family tree.

Walker set the tea on the table by the bed.

"A gentleman telephoned," she said, almost in a whisper. "A foreign gentleman. A Prince he was. He wanted to know if you was home yet." She peered intently at Brinda. "Would you be knowing anyone like that?"

Brinda smiled. Vasilav, of course. He had been worried when the chauffeur returned without her. "Yes, Walker. I know him. Thanks for the tea."

But the housekeeper still lingered, her gaze darting here and there, her manner fraught with vague foreboding.

As I enter the pier newboys are hawking the late night extras on the streets outside. I buy one. Bold black headlines scream:

"German U-Boat Torpedoes Tanker off New York Harbor!"

I glance at the story, hitch my equipment a little tighter, and join the long lines trudging up the gang plank.

SENATOR M. HARVEY TAYLOR TOSSES POLITICAL BOMBHELL AT U. S. SENATOR JAS. J. DAVIS

he has spent a great portion of his time in recent months in various sections of this State, endeavoring to promote his gubernatorial aspirations instead of devoting his efforts and energies to the vital national problems which were entrusted to him by the voters of Pennsylvania. Even the disaster of Pearl Harbor has apparently failed to arouse him to a proper sense of his responsibility as a senior member of the very Senatorial committee which has legislative control over the character and extent of our provisions for the naval defense of the Pacific.

"Now for the first time Davis openly and publicly admits that his selfish desires and ambitions are more important to him than the carrying out of the responsibilities for which he was elected. Spurning General Martin's generous offer to retire as a candidate for a position for which the General's thousands of admirers regard him as the best qualified man in the State of Pennsylvania, Senator Davis, for selfish and mercenary reasons, flatly rejected the proposal that he drop the political activities which are consuming so much of his time and attention and devote himself to the proper performance of his duties as a United States Senator in Washington.

"In this time of national emergency it is indeed shocking to think that a member of the United States Senate could be so selfish in his motives and so disregardful of his obligations to his state and his nation."

the housekeeper. "Like a bandage over her eyes, it is." Then, as Brinda's face only expressed further bewilderment, "You mean you've never seen her?"

Again, Brinda experienced a weird tingling along her backbone. Could it be that the responsibility of tending the home of Britain's Intelligence Chief had added the housekeeper's brain? But no, Walker looked as stolid and unimaginative as ever. Only her eyes, rheumy and restless, continued to search the room. Following them, Brinda realized with a start that Walker was peering intently at the jewel cabinet. Too intently.

Brinda arose. "Walker," she said decisively, "you're tired. You'd better go to bed." Mentally, she decided to put a lock on her door the next day.

"Very good, Miss." The housekeeper picked up the tea-things and turned toward the door. "I didn't mean to speak wrong. I always try to mind my business. But—" and there was no mistaking the concern in her voice this time—"do be careful, Miss. Your Uncle wouldn't want you to end up like that Mata Hari. Her that got shot by the French for being a spy." The door closed behind her.

"Ugh!" Brinda shivered. Yes, there could be no doubt—the atmosphere of the house was affecting the housekeeper. Too much tragedy and violence—Kenley's murder, the stabbing of Sir John, the blood-stained trunk and its horrible contents—no wonder Walker's simple mind was reeling!

Yet, as Brinda's gaze wandered back to the jewel cabinet, it seemed to her for an icy moment that she, too, saw a dark-haired, graceful woman, with some kind of strange veil over her eyes, kneeling before it. Then she realized that she was not looking at the jewel cabinet, but at its reflection in the pier-glass, and that the illusion was caused by some trick of drapery and her own flesh.

"I'm worse than Walker!" she murmured with a smile. Despite what, when she drifted off to sleep, it was to dream a strange, disturbing and endless dream in which were curiously intermingled, Dick, Walker, Lord Mountwain, Vasilav, and a strangely beautiful woman with blue-black hair and a dark, golden skin and a mysterious, tender smile. . . . But a bandage hid the dream creation's eyes, and when Brinda sought to lift it, she found only deep, deep pools that somehow she knew were pools of tears.

On the afternoon after the bombing of Dick's laboratory, Prince Vasilav sat at the gold-inlaid desk in his private study, moving ivory pieces on a chessboard of ebony and Circassian walnut. There was a discreet knock on the door, and a servant admitted the chauffeur who had

County officials, worried as to what would happen if a high explosive or incendiary bomb scored a direct hit on the county courthouse.

Pointing out that almost every court house and city hall in the state holds such irreplaceable papers as wills, deeds and court records dating back to the beginning of the Commonwealth, Stevens said the historical commission stood ready to expand the plan into a state-wide service, adding:

"Microfilm is not new, but heretofore it has been used mainly as a means of conserving space or for reproducing documents whose originals were deteriorating with age. The vital part microfilming may play in home defense, by safeguarding priceless records from possible destruction by the enemy, is just becoming apparent."

Microfilming, Stevens explained, is a simple method of photographing documents page by page and preserving the prints on film about the size of a regulation movie film. The film is easily preserved and can be projected for study much as movies are projected.

"Although the film is inflammable," said Stevens, "it could be stored in a vault with an ease impossible for the originals. Important, too, microfilming preserves records cheaply and efficiently."
